Chapter 10, Test 10B - Cengage..What Really Matters is Relationship with God When I Am Sad, Angry, or Upset Filing for bankruptcy in 1985 at the age of 44 was a life changing and defining experience for me. Before that decision, my life was in a downward spiral. I had fallen out of love with the Lord, the church, and even myself. During those years of hardship, I found it difficult to trust in God and feel like God cared. My faith needed rebuilding. Because of God's goodness, I was blessed with time and a supportive network of people, including other pastors who helped me restore my relationship with God. I learned that what really matters is relationship with God, even when I am sad, angry, or upset. 2. I learned to trust. Being overwhelmed with grief, anger, and bitterness – especially at God – can bring out the cold heartedness in a person. But God is more than able to restore trust in the midst of difficulties. 3. I learned that justice is important. During my time in church I taught Sunday school and was active in the church's youth programs. One time, I felt so angry at God over a sin in my life that I felt tears streaming down my face. Another time I felt so hurt by a friend who hurt me that my body could have been on fire. Other times I felt like God was treating me unfairly or capriciously. Through it all, God restored my trust in him and reminded me that I should be angry, sad, or upset – at ourselves, not at him.

4. I learned to forgive. I have no doubt that God is the perfect parent. Sometimes
