***DETAILS*** SERIAL-VULT is a simple, efficient, standalone database for product information. If you own a device, you can register and organize its data in a clean, easy-to-use interface. The application is free, but is a simple, but useful database on your computer, If you give data on your device such as serial number or product code, it can be registered with one click. Then, you can manage it easily on the next screen. It can store product images, serial numbers, device names and manufacture information as a database. The application is expected to have the following features. ① Recording device information that is input by the user. ② Organizing data with dropdown menus in the structure of a relational database. ③ Viewing and deleting data with properties such as the date, name and manufacturer. ④ Printing information that is organized in a simple manner using a relational database. ⑤ The ability to add notes, product information, and custom images for each device. - **SERIAL-VULT Features** - Store device information: As a data storage of product information, you can store the device's name and type, serial number or product code, and a custom image of the device that you can load into the application. * Data can be easily registered by making one click in the row. - Organizing data: Add other information, such as device name, type, serial number, product code, and manufacturer, as well as notes and customized images. - Search information: Organize data according to date, name, maker, type, serial number, or product code. - Viewing information: Browse data according to the date, manufacturer, name, and type. - Printing information: Print images, data, notes and device images. - Note: The application does not include a printing option to print your data. However, there are two printing methods that can be used to print your data. - One is the print function within the application that saves you the trouble of manually printing your data. This is included, but users would need to save the data to a separate folder after printing, and make sure the images are in that specific folder before printing them. - The other printing method is the print function of

SerialVault 2022 [New]

SerialVault was designed to assist law enforcement agencies with tracking and monitoring lost or stolen cell phones, tablets, and other small electronic devices. At present, the software provides comprehensive tracking capabilities for nearly all of these devices. Once your device is loaded with SerialVault, each and every move or action performed on the device, such as making a phone call, sending a text message, accessing the internet, or making a trackable GPS data point is recorded in its own note, giving you a complete log of the device's movements. The information collected is stored for a user specified amount of time or until it is manually deleted. By simply running SerialVault on a different device, you can track your lost or stolen device. The free version of the software provides limited functionality, including tracking a single device. The $20 license will allow you to track 10 device, or 5 devices with the serial number of each tracked added on a separate line. The retail version of the software provides more advanced features, including the ability to manually track a single device, or track up to 100 devices, each with its own unique serial number. The program has two options for viewing the information: Either all of the details about a device are displayed in a small window, or you can run SerialVault in a full-screen mode, making it easy to review every aspect of a device. Updates: Version 1.2.0 adds an option to view the details of an individual device, along with a few other minor updates. Version 1.3.0 adds information about the current location of the tracked device, a new "Device Information" window that displays all of the information pertaining to the device, a new screen capture option in the "Log" window, and a new "Device Information" window that displays all of the information pertaining to the device. This ensures that even people who install the newest version of the program get the new look and functionality. Version 1.4.0 adds an option to "Give Device Feedback" which allows users to manually report the stolen or lost device to the software developers. Version 1.5.0 adds the option to "Delete Device" for devices that are not tracked. Version 1.5.1 adds the option to manually delete individual "Log" entries, adding to the overall functionality of the program. Version 1.5.2 adds a new time frame for new "Log" entries, which also allows users to display "Log" entries they want to permanently delete b7e8fdf5c8
